

SHUN THE HOSPITALS

No Well-to-do Englishman
Ever Goes to One.

NOTED SURGEON TELLS WHY

The British Institution Is Purely
Charitable, and the Man Who Can Afford It Prefers to Be Cared For in His Own Home—Great Difference in Home Life of an Englishman.

From the Chicago Evening Post.

Dr. Linn Thomas, Cardiff, Wales, a surgeon who was decorated by King Edward for establishing a model field hospital in South Africa during the Boer war, is making a tour of the United States visiting the hospitals.

The difference between the hospitals in Great Britain and in America is due to the difference in economic and social conditions of living in the two realms, in the opinion of Dr. Thomas.

"In Great Britain," said the surgeon, "the hospitals in the true sense of the term are all charitable institutions. No one who can afford to pay for an operation or for treatment ever goes to a hospital. He is attended in his own home, except that now a few private institutions are maintained by nurses, and some pay patients are now taken to the place where every one, rich or poor, is taken."

Do Not Move Often.

"I think this is attributable to the difference in the home life of the British and the American. In Great Britain a man owns his house or a few acres of land, and a man pays rent for his home it is on the understanding that he will hold it for year after year. There is little change of residence. Here the rule is quite the other way, and the families that do not move once a year or so are in the minority. In our country, therefore, a man feels an attachment for his home and does not want to be taken away. Personally, I believe a patient is likely to receive better attention in a hospital where the service is systematized than in a private household."

Here it is the other way in most cases. People live little attached to their homes. Their households are not fitted for the care of the sick. The members of the family are too driven and rushed to be burdened with the care of a long illness.

Private Hospitals Small.

"In Great Britain the private hospitals are small affairs—generally nothing more than a group of connected houses. Some of them are good and their use may become wider as time goes on. Personally, I believe a patient is likely to receive better attention in a hospital where the service is systematized than in a private household."

"The surgeons in this country do a vasty greater amount of work than they do at home. They take advantage of the hospital facilities, and the number of assistant surgeons at their disposal in this way enables them to attend to more cases."

"In Great Britain a surgeon has more detailed care of his cases. I noted one curious incident in this country. In a small city of Rochester, Minn., I found a hospital where two surgeons of international reputation were conducting an up-to-date hospital and handling as much work as any two men in the world. The institutions of Chicago are up in the forefront of the world with those of the rest of the world."

MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Protestant Episcopal Bishops to Attend Gathering at Asheville.

A conference of the Third Missionary Department of the Protestant Episcopal Church will be held at Asheville, N. C., beginning Tuesday, October 9. These conferences are held every year in different parts of the United States, for the purpose of arousing interest in missionary subjects. Last year the gathering was in Nashville, Tenn., and was a most successful one. "This year there is every prospect that there will be a larger attendance of the clergy of the neighboring States than ever before."

The programme, which has been published, announces speakers of unusual interest. Bishop Burton, of Lexington, Bishop Paterkin, of West Virginia, Bishop Gibson, of Virginia, Bishop Balto, of Tennessee, and Bishop Penick, who was for some time Bishop of Liberia, will attend and speak.

The railroads have made liberal rates for those who wish to attend this conference. In addition to the bishops and clergymen of prominence who will be present, the Episcopal Church is represented by John Wood, secretary of the Board of Missions for the Third Missionary Department, will also attend, and it is expected that several other clergymen of the city will take the opportunity of visiting Asheville.

FOR CIVIL SERVICE PENSIONS.

National Organization Taking Steps to Get Bill Through Congress.

With renewed vigor and confidence of success in the ultimate passage of a bill through Congress for the retirement of civil service employees upon pension, the United States Civil Service Association has taken up an active campaign among the members of Congress, and has inaugurated a campaign by sending letters to the members of the House and Senate urging the passage of the bill.

Government employees have been asked for a unity of action on this measure, and a circular has been sent them, requesting them to sign the membership roll. The circular sets forth the dues and states the necessity for immediate payment in order to meet legitimate expenses. The circular also sets forth the fact that they have secured the promises of many eminent men to appear before Congress to aid the movement. Letters have already been received from several representatives promising aid in obtaining favorable action upon the bill.

For Jamestown Policing.

Chief of Police H. Mallory Boush, of Norfolk, Va., will be here in a few days to consult with Maj. Sylvester regarding plans for the policing of the Jamestown Exposition. Norfolk is the largest city in close proximity to Jamestown, and the work of policing the grounds will be directed from that place.

Patrolman to Be Married.

Patrolman McGill Grove, of the Seventh precinct, will be married this afternoon to Miss Anna N. Beall at the parsonage of the West Street Presbyterian Church. Rev. William C. Alexander will perform the ceremony. The couple will go on a ten-day trip.
